

DEFENSE INDUSTRY TRAINING

www.macomb.edu/DefenseTraining

Supported by a $4.9 million grant from the Department of Labor, Macomb Community College is developing and providing training to better position unemployed workers, under-employed workers, dislocated workers and veterans for jobs in the defense sector in southeast Michigan. Macomb Community College has agreements with community colleges and other educational institutions, including Schoolcraft College, in Southeast Michigan to promote training within this grant. There are many training opportunities in development, so it is important to check the above webpage frequently to identify potential training opportunities that match your circumstances.

While the college is working with defense sector employers to identify training and education to better prepare potential employees, there is no guarantee of employment based on completion of classes or a program.

Here's what you need to do to participate:

1. Register with the MichiganWorks Talent Bank
2. Check www.macomb.edu/DefenseTraining on a regular basis to identify opportunities that match your needs
3. Visit the training schedule to register for class
  - You can view course offerings, course descriptions, and registration instructions.
    - Please note, the registration process may be different depending on the nature of the class. Some classes may require you to attend a mandatory orientation before acceptance in a class is granted. Detailed information will accompany such classes.
