Anthropology 2012-2013 CATALOG

You might picture pith helmets, grass huts and grad students out to save the world but anthropology means more than that. It means studying humankind around the planet and through the ages. It also means moving out of yourself—reaching beyond your own customs and values—to examine those of other cultures. Commit to the journey and you might return with a greater understanding of yourself. Our courses cover Native American traditions, world religions, linguistics, cultural diversity, prehistoric cultures, archaeology and more.

WHY CHOOSE AN ANTHROPOLOGY COURSE?

Because...

- You want a better understanding of religious beliefs in our changing world.
- You want to examine other cultures—and know more about your own.
- You want to learn about politics, kinship, marriage and the traditions that shape our lives.
- You want credits that may count toward your associate degree.
- You want to earn credits that may transfer toward a four-year degree.

Anthropology courses are identified by the prefix ANTH.
