O, 'Tis Love, 'Tis Love, That Makes the World Go Round: a History of Valentines

Whether you love it or hate it, it's Valentine time! Many people disparage Valentine's Day as a "Hallmark holiday," but it actually has deep historical roots with some surprising twists and turns. For example, did you know that the classroom Valentine card box has its origins in an ancient Roman fertility festival? Or that the Victorians sometimes sent insulting Valentines to those they didn't like? You can see some of these "vinegar valentines" along with friendlier cards from the early 1900s to the 1950s at this light hearted presentation. Guests will have a chance to make their own Valentines to take home.
