Howard Stein
Professor, Center for Afroamerican and African Studies, U of M
Visiting Professor, Department of Epidemiology, U of M
GLOBALIZATION, NEO-LIBERALISM & AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT

Dr. Stein, an expert in Asian and African development, will discuss the impact that globalization has had in Africa and will offer a critique of and alternatives to orthodox financial liberalization. He is currently working on a book that aims at criticizing the World Bank and IMF approach in Africa and attempts to generate a different set of policies based on institutional economic theory.

THE GODS MUST BE CRAZY

This highly original, offbeat comedy is a zany tale composed of three intertwined plots. Xi, a Ju’hoansi Bushman of the Kalahari desert, encounters in the shape of a Coke bottle. He takes it back to his people where it is used for many tasks until his people start to fight over it. He decides to return it to the Gods--where he thinks it came from. The second subplot is a love story between a big-city reporter escaping the pressures of the city by taking a job as a schoolteacher in a remote village and a clumsy Afrikaans micro-biologist working in the Kalahari. The third subplot is a tale of inept revolutionaries who manage to bungle an assassination attempt and flee towards the Kalahari Desert. Trust me. It all comes together.

Written and directed by Jamie Uys (who also plays the Reverend), this film was originally recorded in Afrikaans. The English overdub version was released in the U.S. in 1984 and became the highest grossing foreign film in American history.

Won the Most Popular Film (1983) and a Special Award for the Best Foreign Film (1985).

Languages: English/ Afrikaans/ Ungwatsi
Rating: PG
Runtime: 109 minutes

The International Film Festival is sponsored by the Schoolcraft College International Institute and supported by a grant from the Schoolcraft College Foundation.

WE WISH TO INFORM YOU THAT TOMORROW WE WILL BE KILLED WITH OUR FAMILIES: STORIES FROM RWANDA

By Philip Gourevitch
Pageturners February Book Selection

Publisher's Weekly

New Yorker reporter Philip Gourevitch “found many numbed Rwandans who had lost whole families to the machete” during the 100 days in Rwanda when over 800 thousand people were killed. He discovered a few admirable characters, including hotelier Paul Rusesabagina, who, “armed with nothing but a liquor cabinet, a phone line, an internationally famous address, and his spirit of resistance,” managed “to save refugees in his Hotel des Milles Collines in Kigali.” Gourevitch’s “quiet advocacy” reminds readers how “genocide occurred in this decade while the world looked on.”

Pageturners is the college book discussion group. Students facilitate each informal discussion; faculty often attend and give students partial course credit for reading a selection, attending a discussion, and writing up a short assessment. Pageturners selections can be purchased for 40% off retail price at the Student Activities Office: 734 462-4400, ext. 4422

IMAGINING AFRICA: THE CONSTRUCTION OF A “DARK” CONTINENT

Africa Presentation Series

This presentation investigates the ways in which the West has represented Africa, with all its diverse societies and peoples, from the 19th Century until the present time. Special attention is given to the media used to construct particularistic images of Africa and the accuracy of these representations. These media include photographs, maps, the news and entertainment media, the travel industry, as well as academic disciplines.

John Metzler has taught, researched and led study abroad programs for educators and undergraduates in southern Africa since 1972. His outreach duties at MSU include working with educators and students from K-12 schools and community colleges, businesses with interest in Africa, and the media. John also serves as the point person in the African Studies Center for study abroad programs in Africa which directs summer and semester programs in South Africa. His research focus is on educational policy in southern African and the impact of globalization on schooling in Africa.

The Africa Presentation Series is sponsored by the Schoolcraft College International Institute and supported by a grant from the Schoolcraft College Foundation.

<td>Based on Alex Haley's best-selling novel about his African ancestors, Roots, the mini-series, follows several generations in the lives of a slave family. We will be viewing only the first segment of this saga which begins with a depiction of social and family life in Africa and the impact of the slave trade. In this segment Kunta Kinte (LeVar Burton), a West African youth, is captured by slave raiders and shipped to America in the 1700s. Roots remains one of television's landmark programs. The twelve-hour mini-series aired on ABC from January 1977. For eight consecutive nights it riveted the country. The success of Roots had lasting impact on the television industry. The show defied industry conventions about black-oriented programming: executives simply had not expected that a show with black heroes and white villains could attract such huge audiences. <td>As the Library Journal notes, this novel “depicts the rise and fall of Okonkwo, a Nigerian whose sense of manliness is more akin to that of his warrior ancestors than to that of his fellow clansmen who . . . are appeasing the British administrators who infiltrate their village.” The book was first published in 1958, two years before Nigeria declared independence from Great Britain. <td>In March Joan Mumaw will be returning from South Africa to speak to us about the global AIDS crisis as it is impacting the people of Southern Africa. She brings with her many years of hands-on experience working to develop a coordinated response to the devastating AIDS pandemic in Africa. This virus carries incalculable social and economic implications for the already impoverished nations of Southern Africa. In striking down millions of people in the prime of life, the epidemic is leaving disproportionately few young adults to support the elderly and the children.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Joan Mumaw is on the staff of the Catholic Institute of Education in Johannesburg and has collaborated on initiatives aimed at raising awareness of HIV/AIDS and its implications, especially for teachers and children in schools. Teachers and parents are culturally conditioned not to talk about sexuality and therefore about HIV/AIDS. It is critical to begin a dialogue about the disease and its impact on every area of life. Joan received a BA in History and Political Science from Marygrove College and an MA in Anthropology from Wayne State University. She has spent 6 years in Uganda and nearly 10 years in South Africa. Joan’s leadership was recently recognized when she was elected Vice-President of the Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, Monroe, Michigan.</td>

MULTICULTURAL FAIR

The Multicultural Fair, now in its 5th year, is a celebration of the wide variety of cultures on our Schoolcraft College campus and features:

- More than 2 dozen country displays where students actively share their culture and answer questions
- Performances which run continuously and feature dance, music, art and poetry
- Language demonstrations
- Demonstrations of origami, henna painting and yoga
- Cross-cultural snacks from a variety of ethnic cuisines provided free by area restaurants.
- “Passports” issued at the door to “travelers” can be “stamped” by each country table they visit.

Besides promoting cultural sensitivity and increasing an awareness and appreciation of other cultures, the Fair extends education beyond classroom walls by exposing students, faculty and staff to a cross-cultural experience. Most importantly, it creates an opportunity for students to teach others.

This event, created for students and community by students and community, is free of charge and open to the public.

Be a part of the Multicultural Fair!

David Doris

Assistant Professor, Center for Afroamerican & African Studies, U of M

Assistant Professor, History of Art Department, U of M

YORUBA ART AND CULTURE

David Doris maintains a special focus on the art and culture of the Yoruba people, both in southwestern Nigeria and in the Diaspora. The Yoruba people enjoy a rich cultural and artistic heritage dating back as far as 1000 years ago. Even objects of everyday life may be dazzling pieces of art that might also reflect spiritual or moral beliefs. Religious affiliations manifest themselves in all aspects of Yoruban life.

Dr. Doris, a Ph.D. from Yale University, specializes in the history of African arts and visual cultures and recently co-curated the “Masterworks of African Art: Yoruba,” an exhibit of Nigerian culture, at the University of Michigan Museum of Art. David’s dissertation won the 2004 Roy Sieber Memorial Award for Outstanding Dissertation in the Field of African Art History.

THEIR EYES WERE WATCHING GOD

A story of a resilient woman's quest for love, sensual excitement and spiritual fulfillment, despite society's expectations of a woman of color in 1920s America. Ms. Berry stars as Janie Crawford, whose journey takes her through three marriages with very different men, and during which she experiences all that life has to offer, from tremendous success to unspeakable heartbreak. Based on Zora Neale Hurston’s 1937 novel and produced by Oprah Winfrey. The movie which aired March 2005 on ABC was nominated for a Golden Globe.

Starring Halle Berry and Ruben Santiago-Hudson.

<td>Learning about different nations and cultures and about their interconnections is an important part of education in the 21st century. At Schoolcraft, students will have the opportunity to demonstrate such proficiency by earning an International Certificate as part of their degree. This program, overseen by the College’s International Institute, requires participating students to complete a minimum of 15 credit hours of classes designated as International. Such classes, which are identified in the class schedule every semester, contain at least two weeks of global or multicultural content. Internationalized sections are available for a growing number of courses, including those involved in various program requirements. The International Certificate is an attractive option for students pursuing any of a variety of programs.</td>
